Kids at previous Science-sational Day

MORRIS COUNTY 4-H INVITES KIDS
FROM ACROSS THE COUNTY TO 4-H
SCIENCE-SATIONAL DAY
OPEN TO GRADES K-6 FROM ALL 39 MORRIS TOWNS – SLOTS GOING FAST

Calling all young Morris County scientists – or kids who just want to have some science fun! Explore new ideas, put your designs to the test, and discover a new love for science at Morris County’s 11th annual “Science-sational Day” on Saturday, March 30.

Morris County 4-H will hold “Science-sational Day” at the County College of Morris in Randolph, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Participants do not have to be 4-H members.

Kids can explore all sorts of fun and exciting science at the event, which is for specifically designed for Morris County youths in grades K-6.

Interested parents should enroll their children as soon as possible. The official registration deadline is March 15. However, all of the maximum 150 available slots for participants are likely to be gone very quickly.

“This is a fun-filled event that encourages young people to get excited about science,” said Kelly Dziak, Morris County 4-H Program Associate. “It supports the 4-H program’s involvement in hands-on science education. We want people to know that 4-H is for all kids with a passion for discovering new interests including like science and technology.”

- 4-H Science-sational Day is scheduled on Saturday, March 30 in Cohen Hall at the County College of Morris in Randolph.
- Cost per child is $25. Lunch is available for an additional charge.
- Parents may attend the program with their child(ren) at no cost.
- Register online here. Be sure to register each child individually.
- Download the permission form here.

Science-sational Day offers 12 choices of lively, hands-on workshops, split into various grade levels, on a variety of science topics including biology, chemistry, engineering, and more.

It will kick-off with a large group activity presented by Mad Science entitled, “3, 2, 1, Liftoff!”
